2018 League Symposium Recaps

The 2018 League Footing Academy was held January 12-13 followed by the League Symposium January 14-17, both taking place in California. As always, it was a great event that was fun as well as educational. For the Symposium, we used a new layout for the classroom sessions and sponsor/vendor area, and this was very well received.

Below is a recap from one of our 2018 League Symposium Sessions. However, this doesn't approach the value of actually attending, so make plans to join us in 2019!

Concession Food & Beverage

Presented by Rey O'Day of Wings of Fame Productions

Rey O'Day from Wings of Fame Productions explained how owning and operating a concession stand yourself gives you more control over the customer experience, but hiring an external catering company takes the burden of risk off the facility. When planning concession services are some important factors to consider:

- Keep everything as affordable as possible for the consumer by knowing which foods are most cost effective.
- Food safety needs to be the highest priority. Make sure everything is stored at the correct temperatures and employees wash their hands.

- Make sure trash is disposed of properly and recyclables are well-labeled.
- Lastly, don't forget to smile and make eye contact with customers.

Board Member Profile: Brandi Herndon

Expo Square

Brandi Herndon has been a member of the League for over a decade and she's also the Agri-Business Manager at Expo Square in Tulsa, Ok., where the League will be hosting its 2019 Annual Symposium.

"In January, we are going to host the League Symposium," she said. "It will be our first time hosting the event and we are very excited to showcase our recently renovated 240-acre facility. We are proud to be one of the largest complexes in the country, hosting a wide variety of horse and livestock events, such as the United States Arabian National Show and World Pinto Show. Including our new barn and flexible set-ups, we have the capacity to accommodate upward of 3,000 stalls. We also host other events and consumer shows, including the Tulsa RV and Boat Show and even many high school graduations."

Brandi, who has been working at Expo Square for about 16 years, feels quite a passion for agriculture and livestock. "I grew up showing cattle and horses," she explained. "I have always been passionate about the livestock industry. It has just turned into a career for me. When I was younger I showed livestock at the state and local levels. Then I went to Oklahoma State where I majored in Agribusiness. Upon graduation, there was an opening at Expo Square in the livestock fair department to process entries, and the rest is history." Today, Brandi raises cattle with her husband, Bart, and two young daughters.

Being a member of the League has helped Brandi forge many valuable connections.

"Networking and relationships are so important in this industry," Brandi said. "I remember even at one of the first Symposiums I attended, I made connections with people from the Oklahoma

State Fair Park. Now, if I'm facing a problem or have a question about facility management, I can pick up the phone and call other people I've met through the League."

"When you network with League members, they become your friends," she added. "Each year, we send some of our staff members to League events and they come back with a wealth of knowledge. We've created great relationships. We are looking forward to hosting the symposium and having people see our facility!"

Feature Article: MD Barnmaster

Finding the right barn for your facility can be challenging. However, MD Barnmaster prides itself on designing custom barns and equestrian facilities, tailored to everyone's needs.

"We build barns both large and small for everything from fairgrounds to racetracks to backyard barns," Terry Deaton, Director of Sales and Marketing, explained. "Our company just joined the League last year, and it has been exciting to meet a wide-variety of folks from all over who operate and manage facilities throughout the country."

MD Barnmaster is based in California, but they serve a wide-range of customers throughout the world. "We thought being involved with the League would be a great way to introduce ourselves to major players across the country," he explained. "Our company has been in business for 34 years and we are based in in Ontario, Calif. We ship barns all over the world, even to places as far as Germany or Italy."

Most recently, MD Barnmaster built all the stalls for the 2018 FEI World Equestrian Games held at Tryon International Equestrian Center in North Carolina. “Our barns are unique because of their longevity and sturdiness,” Terry said. “One of our barn walls typically weights about 480 pounds. We use a material that is fireproof, washable, and kick proof. We even offer a lifetime kick-through warranty that if somehow a horse kicks through the barn, we will repair it.”

Terry and MD Barnmaster are pleased to be part of the League. “There are so many opportunities to meet new people,” Terry commented. “It’s great being able to listen to the speakers, gain new ideas, and learn new philosophies.”
